

Catherine Yovan is a passionate dance educator and artist with a strong foundation in both performance and choreography. She began dancing at a young age and went on to earn a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Dance and Choreography from East Carolina University. During her training, she performed with the Gus Giordano School in Chicago and later participated in the prestigious American Dance Festival. She also worked internationally with Stibdance in Sorrento, Italy, gaining valuable insight into global dance practices. Catherine is committed to fostering technical excellence, artistic expression, and confidence in her students, creating an encouraging and challenging environment for dancers to grow. Above all, she deeply values the connections she builds with her WGDC students and loves watching them develop both as dancers and as individuals.
